

Bush pledges full disaster aid

Associated Press

HOMESTEAD, Fla. — President Bush took an emotional tour Tuesday of Hurricane Andrew's first ravages, pledging 100 percent federal reimbursement for eligible costs of the massive cleanup and rebuilding effort. He ended the day with a TV appeal from the Oval Office, asking Americans to boost private efforts to send aid into Florida and Louisiana.

Hurricane Andrew was devastating, Bush said in his prime-time remarks, but could not "extinguish the American spirit."

"America always will be a nation of neighbors," said Bush. "Although relief effort is well under way, urgent needs still exist and so tonight I make a special appeal to the generous spirit of the American people. I urge all Americans to pitch in any way you can."

During his visit, Bush announced that Homestead Air Force Base, which was ripped apart by the hurricane's storm, will be rebuilt "to show our commitment to south Florida." "We're in this for the long haul. We won't leave until the job is done," said Bush in the courtyard of Homestead Middle School, now serving as an emergency medical center.

Florida officials have estimated the total damages could go as high as $20 billion.

Asked if the government could pay for such an effort, Bush said, "It's going to have to afford it. ... Helping people has to be a priority."

There were complaints last week from Dade County, Fla. officials that Washington had been slow to respond.

A few hurricane victims heckled

the president, but Bush mostly heard thanks as he, his wife Barbara and Defense Secretary Dick Cheney viewed the devastation, comforting those who suffered and applauding the efforts of the military and other rescue workers.

"If it wasn't for the federal government getting involved here, we'd be in big trouble," said Rick Prave, 33, an electrician from Leisure City, Fla.

The Bush party later flew from Florida to Louisiana for a look at the disaster there from Andrew's second U.S. landfall.

There, Bush visited a battered sugar cane farm and a food distribution center where he shook hands with volunteers and people lined up for free groceries.

"I'm not impressed," said one volunteer, Bryan Thompson, 31, of Lafayette, La. "The people in line out front probably appreciate the food more than seeing the president."

It was Bush's second trip to both states since Andrew tore ashore eight days ago and left thousands of Floridians homeless. State officials said Tuesday 6,000 to 10,000 homes were destroyed. They said up to 75,000 others were damaged.

Mrs. Bush called the scene "indescribable.... It's like a war zone."

"The spirit of this place is just unbelievable," said the president. "These people have been hurt bad and yet they're determined to bounce back."

Florida Gov. Lawton Chiles praised Bush's actions, saying, "Everybody's been (terrified) that the base would be closed." One hundred percent reimbursement, he said, "was something we just had to have."

Diner inspections open to public

RED NGUYEN
Assistant City Editor

For people eating out, a restaurant's cleanliness and atmosphere are just as important as the food. Looks can be deceiving when customers aren't admitted in the kitchen to find out about conditions behind the doors.

Some restaurant owners like Demas Jasper, owner of a Lindon restaurant, are applauding the Salt County Health Department for considering to put a list of restaurants and their inspection results in order to protect the public's health.

Jasper said the public has the right to find out about a food service that frequently receives low inspection scores.

The restaurant would be encouraged to raise its standards if they posted their food inspection results," he said. "The public needs to know because the score is just as important as what the bathroom or dining room look like."

The department's assistant director of environmental health, Dwight Hill, said a list hasn't been published because of potential legal problems. However, concerned consumers can call the department at 370-8700 to find out the most recent score of a food establishment.

Students don't have to worry about the cleanliness of BYU's Cougar because it scored 90 out of 100 points in a June inspection. Hill said the score is based upon many areas, such as food preparation, storage, service protection and equipment maintenance. A typical restaurant will receive about three inspections each year.

Diners should be hesitant to eat at a restaurant that scored below 60 points, Hill said. A notice is given to restaurants that score below 60. "If the problems aren't corrected and the notice is ignored, then we call for an informal hearing."

"A score of the upper 70s for a full-service restaurant means they are doing a good job, but the same score for a smaller operation is not good," Hill said. "The full-service restaurant is more complex and has many more things to deal with, so their scores are generally lower than a small fast food place that has a small menu which doesn't change."

Jasper said the department was doing a good job in spite of the shortage of inspectors and funds. The department has nine inspectors who handle more than 900 food service cases.

Hill said a restaurant will be immediately shut down if it has no hot water or if there is sewer backup.

Unresolved problems could be costly for restaurants. For example, Garcia's lost approximately $1 million because of an outbreak of food poisoning linked to the restaurant's salsa, Hill said.

Average guy' wooed by candidates racing to speedways for votes

Associated Press

COLUMBIA, S.C. — Stock car racing is long for the roar of the engine, the smell of burned rubber, the flutter of the checkered flag. This year — whether they like it or not — they're getting the presidential campaign.

"The NASCAR crowd is the pure definition of the Bubba vote," said John Bourne Darden, an Atlanta politician who once worked for the Atlanta Motor Speedway.

It's the middle of the middle class, blue collar, the lower-white collar workers. They are the ones who elect presidents.

This weekend, 95,000 people are expected to watch the Southern 500 in Charlotte, S.C. And it's likely Vice President Dan Quayle will lead the kickoff parade on Saturday, while Democrat Bill Clinton will serve as grand marshal for the main race on Sunday.

President Bush opened the Pepsi 500 in Daytona, Fla., in early July and Quayle started the Diehard 500 in Mobile, Ala., later that month.

If you got all the grease out from under the finger nails of all of them, they probably couldn't fill up a small thimble," Darden said of this year's candidates, scions of family fortunes or Ivy League educations or both. "But Clinton, (Democratic running mate Al) Gore, even Quayle, certainly Bush, ought to be at ease."

In this day and age, they're marketing a candidate just like Tide is marketing a product on the car," said Greg Jennings, a Democratic state legislator who frequently drives the pace car at Darlington.

NASCAR's base is the all-important South, where Democrats hope to break the Republican lock in presidential elections.

The sport also has gained popularity in key electoral states like Michigan and California, said Chip Williams, a spokesman for Daytona-based NASCAR.

Jennings knows that blending the sport and Southern politics can work. Until he found out he was unopposed in an election last year, Jennings had lined up driver Dale Earnhardt for a fund-raising barbecue.

"A heck of a lot more people are likely to attend such an event if Dale Earnhardt shows up than if I brought (Sen.) Fritz Hollings, Al Gore or Bill Clinton here," Jennings said. "This is what basic America does for entertainment," said Warren Tompkins, a Bush aide from South Carolina directing the campaign in the South. "That's what they like. Stock car racing, bowling, that's what a lot of us average guys like to do when we get time."

Doug Heyl, a Clinton campaign aide who is from South Carolina, said too much may be made of the strategy involved in going to Darlington. "We got invited and it sounded fun," he said.

Darden said visiting the stock car races presents little risk for the candidates — as long as they don't act too self-important.

"Imagine if they try to put on airs, nobody could see through that like a real NASCAR fan," said Jennings.

Publication to give faculty lowdown

By BRIAN KAGEL
Senior Reporter

After close to two years, final preparations are being made for publication of the Faculty Preview. "October 1 is our target date, but this is new territory, new software and a new program. We can't guarantee anything at this point," said Blair Janis, chair of the Student Advisory Council faculty preview committee.

Justine Sirken, an executive director over SAC issues, said, "We hope to have it to students for Winter registration."

The cost for the printed edition should be about $3 and SAC hopes to make computer disk copies available also.

While plans on how the preview will be distributed are still tentative, SAC hopes to sell it at the bookstore, at new student orientation and at the dorms. "We also hope to have it available on computers at advisement centers and at the library," Sirken said.

BYU's Faculty Preview is modeled after the University of California at Davis'.

Sirken said the format is similar to the one found in the BYU General Catalog.

"There will be a listing of the professors, their degrees and direct quotes from the other information the faculty gave us on the questionnaire," Sirken said.

The survey asked the faculty their length of time at BYU, what classes were taught, areas of specialty, offices held in professional organizations, teaching honors or awards, and if they had a favorite quote or hobby.

The faculty was also asked about teaching style and tools used, what class time is predominantly devoted to, what assignments generally consist of, the role of the student in their class, the primary method of grade evaluation and any other aspects of their teaching experience or style that they consider notable.

Female spy killed in Bosnia warfare

Associated Press

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina — The death notice in the newspaper was brief: "One last goodbye to Carmen Emini Konda."

It had to be that way. "There was too much to say, so I couldn't say anything," her husband said.

Bosnian soldier, intelligence operative and karate aficionado, Carmen Konda died following a car accident late last month under heavy Serb gunfire.

She was a homemaker who missed her children, cooking and dancing — one of thousands of ordinary Yugoslavs forced by war to do extraordinary things.

Her death was one of hundreds recently among the Bosnian army, which has fought Serb rebels since Bosnia-Herzegovina's majority Muslims and Croats voted for independence from Yugoslavia in February.

The 32-year-old woman cut a dashing figure among the fighters of her team in Stup II, a western Sarajevo suburb.

She moved daily behind Serb lines, gathering intelligence about enemy positions.

"Me and my boys, we crawl to within five meters of them," she said in an interview with The Associated Press early last month. "We have to be patient. Sometimes it rains shells and we just look how to save ourselves. But it's never boring."

Clad in camouflage or jet black overalls, totting a Czech-made Scorpion semi-automatic machine pistol, Carmen was a sight among the ragtag forces of Bosnia-Herzegovina.

"She was the most beautiful woman in the world," said Atif Saronjic, her 39-year-old husband. "When she died, I lost everything."

Saronjic, a thin man with a striking face and charcoal beard, met Carmen late last year in the Croatian port of Split as war in that former Yugoslav republic raged between Serb and Croat forces.

A former marine commando with the Yugoslav navy, Saronjic went to Sarajevo to help form the defense forces of this small country — sandwiched between Croatia and Serbia — as tensions mounted.

He had recently left his wife, so Carmen accompanied him. They fell in love and were married last June.

"I used to watch movies like James Bond that showed that women could do everything," Carmen said last month. "But when you're in this, you wish you were back in a normal life. ... From time to time, when no one's looking, I cry a bit."

"Last night I dreamed about her," he said. "She came to me and said, 'Never go to a dangerous place.' She said, 'I don't want to lose you.'"

"This kind of death makes sense for this kind of war," he added. "There are no heroes here. How can you have heroes when humanity is absent?"

U.N. inspection team under high security

MANAMA, Bahrain — Nuclear weapons experts went to work Tuesday under tightened security in Baghdad on the first United Nations inspection mission since U.S.-led allies set up the "no-fly" zone in southern Iraq.

The 21-member team set out from its Baghdad hotel without disclosing its destination.

The mission has been conducted under unusually high security and secrecy. The United Nations placed its workers on maximum alert after a bomb was found attached to the car of three U.N. guards in northern Iraq on Friday.

Under the U.N. Security Council resolution that set the terms of the Gulf War cease-fire, Iraq is prohibited from possessing or developing weapons of mass destruction. The inspection teams are to ensure that Iraq does not retain nuclear, chemical or biological weapons, ballistic missiles, or the facilities to make them.

The commission is still trying to find out about what U.N. officials describe as "gray areas" in the Iraqi program, including data on Western weapons suppliers who helped Iraq develop its nuclear program.

Baghdad last month served notice that it will prevent access to ministry buildings. The last team in Iraq did not challenge the Iraqis on that score.

Team leader Maurizio Zifferero said he did not know if the U.S. Special Commission, which supervises weapons destruction, would ask him to challenge the ministry ban.

SLC sports project could cost $42 million

SALT LAKE CITY — Building an Olympic speed-skating oval on the city's Block 49 could cost taxpayers and private donors nearly $42 million over the next 10 years, a former budget analyst for Gov. Scott Matheson estimates.

The estimate includes the cost of buying land, destroying buildings and constructing and operating the oval and adjacent recreation center.

It also includes $304,000 in lost property tax revenue when the block, across from Pioneer Park, becomes entirely city-owned.

Dorothy Owen, who now works as a budget analyst for Salt Lake County, said she arrived at the total using figures from memos, letters from Salt Lake Mayor Deedee Corradini and the Utah Sports Authority, and from property tax records at the Salt Lake County assessor's office.

The total is much higher than anything being discussed by the city or the Utah Sports Authority, the agency charged with spending about $59 million in tax revenue on a variety of Olympic venues.

Economy limps ahead at sluggish pace

WASHINGTON — The government's chief economic forecasting gauge signals little improvement in the listless economy until at least next year.

The Commerce Department said Tuesday its Index of Leading Indicators, designed to predict economic activity six to nine months in advance, edged up 0.1 percent in July after falling 0.3 percent in June.

Despite the minor gain, that was hardly good news for President Bush's re-election campaign. "The economy is kind of floundering," said William Dunkelberg, dean of Temple University's business school. "From the politician's point of view, it's the kiss of death."

Economists said the report portrays a sluggish economy, growing rather than shrinking, but too weak to meaningfully reduce an unemployment rate that jumped from 5.1 percent in June 1990 to an eight-year high of 7.8 percent two years later.

The Labor Department is scheduled on Friday to release the August rate. In advance, economists were predicting 7.6 percent, down from 7.7 percent in July.

Gritz had key role in N. Idaho surrender

NAPLES, Idaho — God, guns, and Gritz. The Populist party presidential campaign theme of James "Bo" Gritz also came to describe key elements of the deadly 11-day standoff in northern Idaho between federal agents and Randy Weaver.

Gritz, which rhymes with "sights," rolled into Boundary County with a caravan of aides last Wednesday and demanded a role in the confrontation. Gritz's contempt for the government and the media played well to dozens of people who had gathered near Ruby Ridge to support Weaver, a follower of religion-based white separatism.

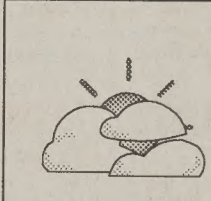

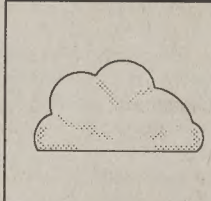

Gritz, a former Green Beret, contended that he and Weaver had a bond as brother soldiers in the U.S. Army Special Forces, a link he boasted he could use to get Weaver to surrender in 10 minutes.

"It takes Special Forces to understand Special Forces. We're not like other people," Gritz said.

Gritz negotiated with Weaver from Friday through Monday, even offering to serve as a human shield when Weaver apparently had second thoughts about giving up.

Gritz's spokesman, Jack McLamb, said Gritz embraces portions of Mormon, Baptist and Christian Identity theology, while rejecting President Bush's "New World Order" and U.S. military intervention outside the country.

Provo kicks off month of literacy awareness

By KEN MEYERS
City Editor

The Mountainland Literacy Coalition kicked off Utah County's Literacy Month Tuesday night with a ceremony at Magleby's restaurant. The theme, "Light on Literacy," reflects the effort to heighten awareness of Utah's literacy problems and stimulate interest among potential volunteer tutors.

Provo Mayor Joe Jenkins highlighted the evening with a proclamation from the City Council citing the fundamental need of literacy for a successful nation.

"People who volunteer know something that nobody else knows," Jenkins said. "There's a reward for being a volunteer that's more than you could ever be paid."

Functional illiteracy in Utah is probably higher than most people think. Officials estimate more than 20,000 adults in Utah County alone do not have the reading skills necessary to participate in today's society.

As part of the ceremony, Becky Charles, a local woman who participated in Provo Library's Project Read, shared her story. Charles dropped out of high school in the 10th grade because she hated school and was so far behind in her reading skills.

"I got a job as a waitress because I didn't think I could do anything else," she said. Her sister later convinced her to sign up for the program. Charles eventually re-entered school and graduated.

"You can never thank the people that helped you because there's no thanks you can give," she said.

There are a number of programs in Utah County in which volunteer tutors help individuals at various reading levels. There is also an English as a Second Language Program. Tutors now total around 300, but there are still waiting lists for adults who would like to learn to read.

Jeri Lyn Martin, who graduated in advertising from BYU in April, has tutored a Chilean woman for more than a year. She said the experience has been wonderful.

"You get involved in their lives, in their families," Martin said. Martin and her husband have been invited to baptisms of the woman's children and other events.

"I really like to read," Martin said. "I don't know how it would be not to have that skill. When you teach someone to read, you don't just change them for now. You change their whole lives."

Students and others interested in volunteering can contact Myla Dutton at 373-8200. Some programs can be coordinated with the university so as to earn credit.

NA test may be allowed West Valley murder trial

Associated Press

PROVO — A judge is expected to decide this week whether to allow a DNA identification test results as evidence in the trial of a West Valley man accused of killing his ex-wife and setting her body on fire. Prosecutors want to use test results on Joe Jiron's DNA, the body's latent fingerprints, to prove that the body fluid found on Shelly Ann Jiron's body came from him. Jiron, 24, is charged with criminal homicide, a first-degree felony, in the death of his former wife. Prosecutors contend he asphyxiated her Dec. 17, 1991, then set afire the car in which they were driving. Jiron suffered severe burns to his face and torso. Jiron's trial is to begin Oct. 5 before 4th District Judge Cullen Christensen. Defense attorneys are trying to suppress the DNA-matching results. Charlotte Word, a molecular geneticist with Cellmark Diagnostics in Germantown, Md., testified during a hearing Monday that four different regions of the DNA in Joe Jiron's blood matched that of the DNA in the fluid recovered from his ex-wife's body.

"I think it's highly unlikely that there would be another individual with this DNA-banding pattern," Word said.

But defense attorney John Musselman said two false positive tests were detected during routine proficiency tests at Cellmark in 1987 and 1988.

Musselman argued that if those tests had been conducted for a criminal case, a Cellmark scientist could have testified incorrectly that those results were accurate.

Word, who joined the company in April 1990, said Cellmark had instituted procedural safeguards to prevent such errors.

The judge also is to decide whether to allow as evidence statements Jiron made to emergency workers, statements made by his current wife to police and a love letter found in Shelly Ann Jiron's car.

Hearings open to determine cause of West Jordan deaths

Associated Press

SALT LAKE CITY — A man charged with murdering his family told police his wife was the only one with a motive to kill her three children and herself.

That motive, Sam Kastanis told police, was Margaret Kastanis' disease and depression that drove her to believe he'd be better off without her or the children.

She had been asking that he divorce her for several months, Kastanis said. "She wasn't all there."

Kastanis was interviewed by police over an eight-hour span on Nov. 17, 1991, the day the bodies of his wife, son and two daughters were discovered in the family's West Jordan home.

Tape recordings of that interview and another police conversation with Kastanis were played in 3rd Circuit Court Tuesday.

Kastanis was charged in June with four counts of aggravated murder. A preliminary hearing began Monday to determine whether there is enough evidence for Judge Michael Hutchings to bind Kastanis over to district court for trial. The hearing is expected to continue through Thursday and conclude next Tuesday.

"I swear to God I did not kill my family. I swear to God. No way. No way," Kastanis said on the tape. "The whole truth: I did not kill my family. I did not use a hammer. I did not use a knife. No way."

Prosecutors contend Kastanis, 44, bludgeoned his children with a hammer and killed them and their mother with a knife in their home. They say he left the hammer and knife by his wife's body to implicate her.

The body of Clint Kastanis, 9, was found in the main floor bathroom, and the bodies of his mother, Mrs. Kastanis, 38, and sisters Christine, 6, and Melissa, 11, were found in a basement bedroom.

In the tape-recorded interviews with West Jordan police officers, Kastanis described a marriage that had been happy for 13 years before the debilitating Epstein-Barre disease left his wife depressed and without energy to contribute as she wanted to the family.

Mrs. Kastanis had been taken to the University of Utah emergency room for treatment of depression, and had been on the antidepressant drug Desyrel for about six months, her husband told investigators.

Defense Attorney Ron Yengich suggested in his questions of West Jordan police officer George Petersen that police had not thoroughly investigated Kastanis' statements about his wife's depression or medication.

On the tape, Kastanis told police interviewers his wife repeatedly assured him of her love, but wanted him to divorce her.

"She feels like she's not pulling her weight in the marriage, that I'm doing everything and she's not doing anything," Kastanis told interviewers. "She kept asking me, 'If you love me, leave me, because I'm going to bring you down.'"

Kastanis said his wife had suggested that the couple split and their children live with relatives.

"There's never been a thought in my mind to eliminate them. Never at all," Kastanis said on the tape. "I've been under a lot of stress. It's been a tough time, but I never thought it would come to this."

On Monday, an audio tape played in court carried Kastanis' calm and measured voice telling an emergency dispatcher that he had found his 9-year-old son bleeding from the nose.

For several minutes, the dispatcher directed Kastanis to check his son's breathing and try to resuscitate him.

Each time Kastanis returned to the phone, he told the dispatcher more about the grisly scene. He said his son was unconscious, not breathing, had apparently chopped off his fingers and also was bleeding from the mouth. He said there were head injuries.

Students invited to join therapy group

LARA MAYO
Campus Editor

Two doctoral students will be writing their dissertations from information gathered through a therapy group conducted at the Comprehensive Clinic in the John Taylor Building this semester.

Eight to ten students will be selected through a screening process for the project. The sessions will be free of charge. The participants are chosen.

The names of the participants will be kept confidential, but evaluations of the sessions, to be done by the participants, will be used in the doctoral students' dissertations. The results will then be submitted for publication, said Margo Miles, a doctoral student of clinical psychology and one of the students analyzing the sessions.

"We want to find out what has been most important or significant in the group ... what has helped them (the participants) in some way," Miles said.

The participants will not work directly with Miles or Jeff Hurd, a doctoral student of counseling psychology at the University of Utah, but with Steve Smith, an associate clinical professor at the Counseling and Development Center.

"Some people say 'I have something bothering me, but I don't want to go to therapy for three years,'" said Hurd. This is a good way for the group members to receive help but not for a long period of time, he said.

The therapy group will be conducted on Tuesdays from 5 to 7 p.m. for 15 weeks.

The sessions will not only work to the benefit of the doctoral students but also to the students that participate in the group. Hurd said the therapy group is ideal because:

* The sessions are led by a licensed psychologist.

* The sessions are part of a research project so participants may quit the therapy at any time.

* Participants have an opportunity to experience group therapy.

* And the sessions are free of charge.

Those chosen to take part in the therapy group will be selected through a screening process. Those not chosen for the group should not be discouraged, Hurd said. "They can still receive help at the clinic."

Anyone interested in the therapy group should call 378-7759.

The free therapy sessions are made possible through a grant from the National Institute of Mental Health.

3 minor traffic accidents mar first day of school

There were three minor traffic accidents at BYU on the first day of school.

All three accidents occurred between 5 p.m. and 6 p.m.

The first accident happened at the intersection of East Campus Drive and North Heritage Drive at 5:05 p.m.

The second accident was on North Campus Drive and occurred at about 5:35 p.m.

The third accident was in the lot north of the Abraham O. Smoot Administration Building and occurred about 5:56 p.m.

University Police Captain Mike Harroun said three accidents on campus in one day is not unusual. "That's not all that bad for the first day" of school, Harroun said.

'U' style locks reduce risk of bike theft, study says

The University Police recently completed a study on bike thefts, and found that bikes locked with "U" style locks are less likely to be stolen.

The study of 100 bikes revealed the average price of the stolen bikes was $352, and all but four or five were either unlocked or secured with cable locks, said University Police Captain Michael Harroun.

Those locked with "U" locks had only components stolen, according to the study.

In the last week, four bikes have been stolen on campus.

Come in and see why we only look expensive.

It's also hard to believe that you get free software when you buy HP 48 calculators.

There's a lot more than a great calculator waiting for you when you purchase an HP 48SX or an HP 48S between June 1, 1992, and October 31, 1992. You'll get a bonus book that's good for free software, a free PC link cable and hundreds of dollars back on applications—like electrical and mechanical engineering—memory cards, training tools, games, and HP's infrared printer.

It's a really big offer. Worth more than $500. And it's going to make your HP 48 calculator even more valuable to you. The free serial cable lets you exchange information with your PC. And the free software disk lets you enter and plot equations easily, do 3D plotting, and analyze polynomials.

Beyond all the bonuses, you'll have the right calculator for your most challenging classes. HP 48 calculators have over 2100 built-in functions and offer a unique combination of graphics and calculus.

Head over to the campus bookstore now. After all, you don't see this kind of deal every day. HP calculators. The best for your success.

PREVIEW

the honors council, estimates about 500 of the 1500 surveys were returned.

"We have had nothing but positive feedback from students, the faculty and administration."

There was some concern from some of the faculty about their rights to privacy, but the preview is completely voluntary," Cirken said.

The only concern BYUSA expressed was that the preview would keep students from real diversity in learning by allowing students to pick and choose so much of their education.

SAC has high hopes for the preview. "We hope the students will tap into it as a resource to enhance their education. With it you will be able to tailor your education, rather than just taking what is randomly given."

"We want students to be able to look at the preview and say 'I'm Mr. Pop Quiz; I'd better choose teacher that will let me write a paper and get my grade,'" said Steve T. ley, chair of SAC.

Young said part of the reason it takes so long to get the preview was lack of student volunteer. "There are a lot more students waiting on the preview now, but we could use more volunteers to edit it," Young said.

Art exhibits to showcase watercolor, photography

By ELISA R. WHITEHEAD
Lifestyle Editor

Photography lovers, outdoor ers and art lovers can attend two exhibits, which opened this week at BYU.

A diverse collection of art works by members of the Utah Watercolor Society opened Tuesday at the George Brimhall Gallery, and a nature photography exhibition opened Monday at the Monte L. Bean Life Science Museum. Both exhibits are free of charge.

Garry Cindrich, director of the Brimhall Gallery, said each year the Utah Watercolor Society sponsors a competition juried by nationally-recognized watercolorists. Paintings in the competition are selected for the Utah Arts Council's traveling exhibition program.

This year's exhibit covers a variety of approaches to watercolor, Cindrich said. The Utah Watercolor Society ex-

This watercolor, "A Tropical Night in the Jungle with Flowers," by Eddi Malloy, is one of the paintings featured at the Brimhall Gallery.

The exhibit is located on the first floor of the Brimhall Building on the south end of campus.

The exhibit is open 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.
Monday through Friday.

The nature photography exhibition at the Bean Museum is a collection of 110 quality photographs chosen from over 160 entries, said Clyde E.
Wilkinson, staff member at the Bean Museum. Although the exhibit is an amateur one, Wilkinson said, "The quality of work displayed this year is worthy of any nature or outdoor lover's observation."

Universe photo by Kim Norman

Wilkinson said the photographs chosen for the exhibit were "recognized for excellence" in the following categories: Nature-scenics, people in nature or outdoor setting environment, wildlife, macro nature and black and white nature-scenics.

The nature photography exhibition is on the 3rd floor of the Bean Museum. The exhibition is scheduled to run through the end of September.
The Bean Museum is open 1 p.m. to 8 p.m. Monday through Wednesday, and 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Thursday through Saturday.

Tale of Timpanogos returns to BYU

By CHARLIE GIDDLEY
Senior Reporter

The Utah Regional Ballet will present a repeat performance of "The Tale of Timpanogos" in the design Concert Hall Thursday, Friday and Saturday. The ballet premiered in the same concert hall in May.

"The response was so good, [the directors] decided to put it right back on the BYU Community Concert Series," said Vicki Thomas, director of publicity for the Utah Regional Ballet, a non-profit organization. "They were wishing they had more performances."

The ballet is based on an Indian legend about Mount Timpanogos told by Chief Walker, and as retold by Andy Anderson, Thomas said. The legend was adapted by June Chipman for the program.

"The Legend of Timpanogos" is about the symbolic union of Princess Ucanogog with her lover, Timpanac, to create Mount Timpanogos, according to a press release from the Utah
Regional Ballet. Timpanac died, Ucanogog begged the Great Spirit to let her be at his side forever. The Great Spirit granted her wish with lightening, thunder and earthquake, rendering her "in perfect profile, fast asleep" on the crest of the mountain,
the press release said.

Guest artist Richard Bradley, of Ballet West, stars as Timpanac.

The ballet is directed and choreographed by Jacqueline P.
Colledge, of Lehi, owner of the Jacqueline College School of Classical Ballet in American Fork. Thomas said, Michael D. Babbitt of Washington, D.C., composed the music.

No Utah Regional Ballet members, all between the ages of 13 and 19 or 20, are paid, Thomas said.

The BYU Community Concert Series is a series of primarily musical and dance events produced by off-campus entities, said Paul E. Duerden, BYU concert manager. The events are usually presented between semesters or terms when BYU classes are not in session.

SPORTS NOTES

•BYU head football coach LaVell Edwards reiterated earlier statements that he won't announce who his starting quarterback until just before Saturday's season opener.

Speaking at Tuesday's Big Five Huddle in Salt Lake, Edwards said he would tell John Walsh and Steve Clements which of them will start the game Saturday afternoon.

"Obviously, I'd like to be able to play both quarterbacks," Edwards said. "I think they're both deserving."

He again praised the team's attitude and focus during the spring and summer leading up to this weekend's game. "I don't think (the quarterback situation) has been a detriment for us. The players have responded well to both of the QBs."

"The conditioning and attitude of this team is as good as any we've had," Edwards said.

"I'm looking for UTEP to be a very tough game for us," he said. "To me, this is one of the most important games we have on our schedule, opening up on the road with a WAC game."

"We have the chance to have a really good football team," said Edwards, looking upbeat and relaxed while smiling and joking with the media and Utah coach Ron McBride.

BYU faces UTEP in El Paso at 7 p.m.

•Former Cougar offensive lineman Mo Elewonibi was placed on injured reserve Tuesday by the Washington Redskins, while several other BYU alums were cut by NFL teams Monday.

Cougars cut by teams trimming their rosters to the NFL maximum 47 Monday, with their former team in parentheses: running back Peter Tupulotu (San Diego Chargers); wide receiver Glen Kozlowski (Chicago Bears); defensive back Eric Bergeson (New England Patriots); offensive lineman Mike Keim (New Orleans Saints).

Other Cougars cut before Monday include Tony Crutchfield (Detroit Lions); Scott Giles (Houston Oilers); Warren Wheat (Seattle Seahawks); Craig Patterson (Phoenix Cardinals); Brian May (Seattle Seahawks).

Former BYU players sticking with NFL teams include Ty Detmer, who will be the Green Bay Packers' third-string quarterback, Steve Young, the starting quarterback for the San Francisco 49ers, Philadelphia Eagles' backup quarterback Jim McMahon, New York Giants offensive lineman Bart Oates and Elewonibi, linebacker Kurt Gouveia and defensive end Jason Buck of the Washington Redskins.

Detmer was the only former BYU player selected in the 1992 NFL draft. After the Cougars won the National Championship in 1984, 10 players were selected by NFL, CFL and USFL teams, the most in the school's history.

Women's volleyball team begins season ranked No. 7

By EARNEST PHILLIPS II
Assistant Sports Editor

BYU's women's volleyball team debuts tonight against Idaho St., kicking off the season ranked No. 7 in the nation and with a new radio contract.

BYU finished second in the WAC last year, finishing the season 26-5, 10-2 in the WAC. The team was eliminated by USC in the first round of the NCAA tournament, losing 15-7, 15-6, 1-15, 15-9.

BYU won the first WAC championship in 1990. Previously, BYU belonged to the High Country Athletic Conference.

The Lady Cougars' games will be broadcast live on radio this fall on KSRR, 1400 AM, in Utah County and KMGR, 1230 AM in Salt Lake City.

Ali's productions, a volleyball media production company, will carry the season opener from Idaho tonight.

BYU's entire men's volleyball schedule will also be carried on the radio network.

The Lady Cougars face a brutal schedule, which includes matches against defending NCAA champion UCLA, Stanford (ranked No. 4), Texas (9), Florida (12) and Pepperdine (17).

The broadcasting of BYU women's volleyball marks the first time in school history that any women's NCAA athletic program will be carried live on commercial radio.

The broadcast will begin with a 1/2 hour pre-game show and end with 1/2 post game show.

The Sept. 25 game against Cal State-Northridge and the Oct. 2 game against Texas Arlington will not be covered due to scheduling conflicts, but the rest of the women's prime-time volleyball games will be aired live.

BYU will participate in an alumnae game Sept. 4, then host UCLA Sept. 11 as part of the BYU Invitational.

YU should get to celebrate s second Heisman in 1992

LaVell Edwards
Heisman Winner?

If all goes well a second Heisman will be awarded to a member of BYU's football team this year. The 1992 Heisman candidate is none other than head coach LaVell Edwards.

With three more wins, Edwards will pass John Heisman, for whom the Heisman Trophy was named, who coached at eight different colleges and collected 185 career victories. Edwards has 183 career victories of his own as he begins his third decade as BYU's head coach Saturday.

In typical LaVellian fashion, Edwards was caught off guard by the fact that he will surpass Heisman's coaching achievements this year. "I didn't even know about it," he said. He did say, however, that personal accomplishments are important to him. He's even "thought about" reaching 200 career wins.

If Nebraska's Tom Osborne (189 wins) and Iowa's Hayden Fry (186) beat Edwards to the magic 200, he will still be only the 15th coach to enter a group more elite than baseball's 3,000 hit club.

At his rate of just over nine wins per season at BYU, Edwards will reach 200 in late 1993.

But what does Edwards say his greatest accomplishment is thus far? "Staying employed this long."

To Cougar fans, it's the National Championship BYU won in 1984 after a 13-0 season. Big winning streaks haven't become rare in Provo. Edwards' team hasn't been beaten in ten straight games; 1991's team opened the season with three losses before maturing into WAC champions by ending the season with eight wins and two ties.

Other streaks are also bountiful. BYU won the WAC for the third consecutive year in 1991, its 13th such title in the last 16 years, and went to a bowl game for the 14th straight year.

So the numbers are staggering. But the coach is also considered by his peers to be an equally good man. "There's not much doubt that LaVell Edwards is one of the really fine people in coaching," said Penn State's Joe Paterno last year. "When the record on his career is written, I'm sure he will be considered among the best ever in college coaching."

Much of the credit for his success will go to his commitment to the passing game. Edwards began his head coaching career with a running back among the nation's leaders. Nearly every year since, the quarterbacks have headlined the Cougar attack.

"He probably coaches the passing game as well as anyone in the country," said Paterno.

Rumors about Edwards' plans for retirement crop up every year. When Green Bay Packer quarterback Ty Detmer's talent became apparent early in his career at BYU, Edwards said he would coach at least as long as Detmer was playing.

Now two immensely talented sophomores are battling for the spot Detmer vacated at the end of 1991, and Edwards has Paul Shoemaker, a promising redshirt, and others lined up for 1995 and beyond.

When will he hang it up and let other coaches make a run at his records? "I haven't really thought a whole lot about it," he said. "If things are going well and I'm healthy and excited, I'll keep coaching."

Some speculate he'll keep searching for a second National Championship, which would also surpass Heisman, who won one at Georgia Tech in 1917.

"I've thought about that," Edwards admitted. "We've got some good young players coming up."

Edwards sees a lot of change on college football's horizon, like the realignment of conferences, more schools dropping the sport altogether and continued financial problems, but he seems relaxed and happy with himself and the program. LaVell Edwards is ready to lead BYU football further toward the 21st century.

"I most enjoy watching teams come together," he said. "Staying at one place a long time, you have to keep recharging yourself. It's easy sometimes to become complacent. But when you start out with spring practice not knowing what you have, then see players grow and develop through the summer and fall and you go on to win championship, it's very enjoyable."

Provo-Hawaii game at Cougar Stadium

By ROMMYN SKIPPER
Universe Sports Writer

Cougar Stadium will be the site of tonight's matchup between the Provo High School Bulldogs and Hawaii's Kahuku High School.

The Oahu, Hawaii-based school has sent several football players to BYU, including freshman Ah You Kingsley, sophomore Curtis Reed, and Mark Atuaia and Itala Mili, who are now on missions for The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

"This is the thrill of a lifetime to play at BYU," said Kahuku's head coach, Doug Semones. "A lot of these kids have never been off the rock before."

Mary Jean Draper, assistant director of BYU Special Events, said Cougar Stadium sometimes sees high school games when various local high schools rent the stadium. The game begins at 7 p.m.

WORK SMARTER. NOT HARDER.

Engineering student? Smart.

Math or science major? Also smart.

On tests, you probably run equations over again to make sure they're right. So you're working harder.

You don't have to do that anymore. Not when you use the TI-85 Advanced Scientific or TI-85 Graphics Calculator, with their last equation replay feature — and many other smart functions.

We've spent years with students like you and educators like your professors to develop the TI-85 and the TI-85. That's why they're so highly recommended.

For engineering students, the TI-85 solves up to five simultaneous equations, has complex number functions and offers formula programming.

The TI-85 builds on the power of the TI-85 by adding a wide range of graphing capabilities. Math students can handle calculus problems more easily. And technical students can see the functions for a better understanding of problems. The TI-85 also handles complex numbers. Matrices. Vectors. Lists. Strings. Plus, it offers a powerful one-equation SOLVER.

Try a TI-85 or TI-85 at your local TI retailer today. And start working smarter. Instead of harder.

Peace Corps in E. Europe focus on economics

BENJAMIN X. NEVES
Staff Writer

Any mention of the Peace Corps conjures up images of idealistic young graduates, mud huts off the banks of the Congo River and digging latrines. These images may soon be changing.

The Peace Corps has opened a new frontier: Eastern Europe. The programs and volunteers that are working in Eastern Europe are vastly different from the traditional and more widely recognized programs currently running throughout the world. Volunteers are presently serving in Poland, Hungary, Romania, Bulgaria, Czechoslovakia, Estonia, Latvia and Lithuania. "We have a signed agreement with Russia and Ukraine and hope to be in by the end of the year," said Matthew Nelson, public affairs specialist for the New York recruiting office. The new European programs are making an effort to assist societies make the leap from communism to capitalism.

There are three basic areas in our European programs: business, teaching English, and the environmental field," Nelson said. The volunteers working in these programs are trying to help establish businesses, increase the viability of tourist trade and attractions, teach English and help provide any other programs that would help stimulate the growing capitalist economies.

The Peace Corps is looking for volunteers with MBA's, extensive business training, agricultural knowledge, and the ability to teach English as a second language for their European programs, Nelson said.

To be considered for entrance into the Peace Corps, prospective volunteers "must be at least 18 years old, a U.S. citizen, in good health, and able to offer at least a B.A. and/or three to five years of full time work experience in a field relevant to the Peace Corps programming needs," said James O'Brien, area manager in charge of New York recruitment.

However, applicants may be turned away for many reasons. Volunteers must pass rigorous medical examinations before they leave the United States.

The applicant may be turned away if he/she requires medication which may endanger their health in the host country, according to Kristin Rowe of the New York office.

The applicant may be turned away for financial problems in the form of bad credit or "excessive" loans. Nelson said student loans would not be considered excessive. Applicants may also be turned away for "personality reasons," Rowe said.

Volunteers can request where they wish to go, but if their skills aren't needed in that particular area and they do not wish to serve anywhere else, they may not be accepted. Volunteers will not be sent to countries where they do not wish to serve.

"The application process may take anywhere from six to nine months between the time someone applies and the time they leave the country," Nelson said.

After a volunteer is accepted, the Peace Corps provides a training session lasting eight to fourteen weeks, held in the host country. This session is designed to teach the language, culture and adaptation of skills to the volunteer. "The language training teaches you how to say 'yes,' 'no' and 'where's the bathroom,'" said Rowe.

The average length of service for Peace Corps volunteers is two years following the language training.

In-country living expenses and a monthly living allowance are paid by the Peace Corps. Volunteers receive $200 for each month of service after the month is over. While serving, volunteers receive a deferment of interest and 15 percent "forgiveness" on federal student loans for each year of service, according to Rowe.

More than 50 graduate schools around the country provide full and partial scholarships for returned volunteers.

Some universities offer limited credit for service, and accept overseas teaching experience as practice in teaching for professional accreditation, Rowe said.

BYU presently does not offer graduate scholarships to returned Peace Corps volunteers.

Utah primary election registration ends today

By RUSSELL FOX
Political Editor

Today is the last day for Utah citizens to register to vote in Tuesday's primary election. Voters wishing to register for the primary at this late date must contact their voting district's neighborhood representative any time until 9 p.m. After that time, "anyone not registered will be unable to cast their vote in the primary election," said Nancy Smith, spokeswoman for the Utah County Republican Party.

Information regarding neighborhood election representatives is available in room 3100 at the Utah County Administration Building. The office will be open from 8 a.m. until 5 p.m. In order to register, you must be at least 18 years old on or before election day, and have lived in the state for 30 days prior to the election.

Utah law does not provide for registration by political parties. When registering for a primary election, one must select a particular party to support and choose between those candidates. In the general election, however, one may vote for a candidate from any party.

This year's Primary Election pits Joe Cannon vs. Bob Bennett for the GOP senatorial nomination, Doug Anderson vs. Wayne Owens for the Democratic senatorial nomination, Richard Eyre and Mike Leavitt in competition for the GOP gubernatorial nomination, Pat Shea and Stewart Hanson for the Democratic gubernatorial nomination, as well as many other candidates.

Primaries have already been concluded in several states and all states will have completed their political primaries within the next two weeks. Utah citizens will be able to register for the November general election until Oct. 13.

Pro-marijuana group sues Salt Lake County over ejection

Associated Press

SALT LAKE CITY — Attorneys for a non-profit group promoting the legalization of marijuana filed a lawsuit against Salt Lake County after the group was banned from the county fair.

According to the lawsuit, fair officer Michael Douglas approached the group, Mood For A Day, on Aug. 14 and said he was offended by certain information being distributed.

Douglas returned that evening and told Mood For A Day representatives that a meeting had been held and fair organizers determined the group would not be allowed to participate in the fair.

"Mood For A Day will vigorously defend our First Amendment right to teach the truth about cannabis hemp," said the group's founder, Maury Modine. "We don't like the idea of a lawsuit, but every effort will be made to settle this out of court to the fair."

County commissioners and fair organizers, including Douglas, were not immediately available for comment.

U of U seeks aid to cover anti-trust investigation costs

Associated Press

SALT LAKE CITY — A U.S. Department of Justice investigation of possible antitrust violations at the University of Utah could cost the school up to $5 million in legal fees.

University President Arthur K. Smith said after a closed-door meeting with Gov. Norm Bangerter that the cost of hiring all the attorneys needed to represent the university is $250,000 a month.

The Justice Department is looking into possible antitrust violations between the state-owned University Hospital and its department of pediatrics and Primary Children's Medical Center, owned by Intermountain Health Care.

"We're asking for the governor's help in dealing with these costs," Smith said.

For example, he said, the Justice Department has forced the school to hire a dozen law firms to ensure that each area under investigation is represented by different counsel.

By June 30, the end of the budget year, the university had spent $2.1 million on the case, even though just $1 million was appropriated by the 1992 Legislature.

Smith said the mounting legal bills are being paid from money borrowed from a permanent endowment fund that must eventually be paid back with interest.

"It pains me greatly to see so much money spent on an investigation," Smith said. "The university regrets very much this whole burden created by the antitrust investigation. We would very much like to get out from under it."

By December, Smith said, he hopes to have a better idea of what the federal grand jury is going to do with the allegations.

If the investigation continues through the end of the next fiscal year, the total cost could hit $5 million, Smith said.
